

Every year beginning in January, University of San Diego students and potential students apply to the Office of Financial Aid for financial aid for the following academic year. Students who apply before the priority deadline and meet the specified criteria usually receive sufficient funding in the form of scholarships, grants, employment and loans to begin or continue their education.

Students often inquire about "other sources" of scholarship and grant assistance that may be available to supplement their financial aid funding or to replace their student loans. While the Office of Financial Aid is the best place to start applying for financial aid, it is not the only source of educational funding. There are many outside resources of financial aid for which students may apply directly. Each year, students are selected for specific scholarships, grants, and loans that they may use to attend the institution of their choice.

Identifying outside sources of financial aid is a challenge. The search can be time consuming and frustrating. The persistent student who succeeds, however, is the first to proclaim that it is definitely worth the time and effort. USD students received over $1,600,000 in outside scholarships and grants during 2005/2006!

The key is to become informed as early as possible before one actually needs the funding. This allows time for identifying viable sources, obtaining the required applications, and meeting the critical deadlines. In other words, applying for outside sources of financial assistance is not something that can be done at the last minute. It requires early planning.

This bibliography has been compiled to assist students in their search for outside sources of assistance. It is updated each year with the assistance of USD Office of Financial Aid Services employees, USD students employed under the Federal Work-Study Program, and USD Librarians. You will note that many of the publications can be found in the USD Copley Library.

We hope you find the guide useful, and we wish you the best of luck in your search for outside resources of financial aid.

Tips For USD Students Who Are Seeking Funding From Outside Resources

Competition for these outside resources has increased with the rising cost of education. You can enhance your ability to secure such funding if you plan ahead. It is important to:

- Assess your particular needs and preferences
- Consider any special circumstances or conditions that might make you eligible for aid targeted to certain types of students
- Thoroughly research available aid programs.

Application Tips:

1. Start Your Search Early

Any search for funding is likely to be more successful if it is started early. If you allow enough time to complete all the necessary steps, you will be more likely to identify a wide variety of awards for which you may qualify and be able to meet the application deadlines. Some experts recommend that you start this process as early as two years before you think you will need financial assistance.

2. Assess Your Needs and Goals

Your first step in seeking financial aid should be to establish your basic qualifications as a potential recipient. To do this, you must clearly define your educational and financial needs and goals (e.g., I want to graduate in four years; I want to keep my student loans to a minimum, my tuition and fees per year = xxxx; my room/board per year = xxxx).

3. Leave No Stone Unturned

Once you have defined your goals, the next step is to identify any special factors that might make you eligible for aid programs that are offered only to certain types of students (e.g., gender, race or ethnic group, membership in an organization, parent's employer, career goal)

4. Allow Enough Time for the Application Process

The amount of time needed to complete the application process for individual awards will vary, so you should pay close attention to application details and deadlines. Some awards carry application deadlines that require you to apply more than a year before study will actually begin. Prepare each application carefully and neatly. Your application gives your first impression.

5. Don't Apply Unless You Are Sure You Qualify

If you find you don't qualify for a particular award, don't apply for it. Instead, use your time and energy to identify and apply for more likely sources of aid.

Tips For USD Students Who Are Seeking Funding From Outside Resources

6. Prepare for a Scholarship Interview

Prepare as you would for a job interview. You are competing with other scholarship applicants. You can prepare yourself by thinking through your answers to the following often-asked questions:

- Describe yourself in a few sentences.
- What are your goals and ambitions for the future?
- Describe your involvement in your school.
- Describe your involvement in your community.
- Who is the individual that has influenced you the most and why?
- In your spare time, what do you enjoy doing?
- Do you have any special talents that make you stand out as an individual?
- If you were to help solve one problem in the world, which would it be and why?
- Why do you feel you should be chosen for this scholarship?

Note: If you need a Letter of Recommendation contact your Faculty Advisor or, if you are a freshman contact your Preceptor.

A Word of Encouragement

By doing your homework, you will greatly increase your chances of finding the necessary funding. The personal labor involved in securing financial support for your education is much like the resume rewriting and door knocking that is required during a job hunt. Success is likely to come to those who make themselves aware of the opportunities available, and who pursue those opportunities in a dedicated, continuous, and systematic manner. Frustration is part of the game and should not bring your search to a halt. In the quest for funding, your most valuable resource is you and your creative initiative.

A GUIDE TO OUTSIDE RESOURCES

OUTSIDE SCHOLARSHIPS

Many organizations and foundations offer scholarship assistance to students by contacting local high schools and colleges. When scholarship programs send information to the USD Office of Financial Aid, the opportunities are briefly described and posted on the Outside Resources Display Boards and on the USD Financial Aid Web Site under Academic Services. In addition, appropriate departments are contacted for assistance in posting the information within departments and for recommendations in identifying or nominating candidates. Criteria for these scholarships are determined by the donor(s) and can include such items as grade point average, class rank, major, SAT scores and/or documented need. Students who have not qualified for federal financial aid may compete for many of these scholarships, and are encouraged to do so. Students who have federal or state financial aid and qualify for private donor scholarships are usually able to use them to reduce loan or work in their financial aid package.

- OUTSIDE RESOURCES DISPLAY BOARDS

Information regarding outside resources of financial aid are posted on display boards near the USD OFA. Students should check these display boards on a regular basis since they are updated as information becomes available.

- USD COPLEY LIBRARY REFERENCE PUBLICATIONS

The University of San Diego Copley Library has many of the publications listed in this bibliography. Students are encouraged to work with a Reference Librarian who can identify specialized resources for specific needs. Area high school students are welcomed to use the reference materials in the USD Copley Library.

- OUTSIDE RESOURCES COLLECTION

The USD Office of Financial Aid has prepared a compilation of information regarding outside resources that have been received by the office during the last year. The collection includes information regarding over 100 sources of scholarships, grants, fellowships, and loans. The Outside Resources Collection is updated yearly by the staff of the USD Office of Financial Aid, and is made available at the Reserve Desk in the USD Copley Library.
