PATRON SUGGESTION

Please stop ripping off the law students in a pointless effort to keep undergrads out. Lower the printing cost to 5¢! If you actually think the extra two cents repels undergrads, you are sadly mistaken. Our prehistoric wireless Internet already takes care of that.

LIBRARY RESPONSE

June 2, 2008

Well, we are hoping to cut down on lab overcrowding when law students need to print, but if you have figures or convincing examples that show that this isn't working, we will certainly take a look at them. What I really wanted to do was make double-sided printing 10 cents a page (while keeping one side at 7 cents) as an incentive to conserve paper, but we have been told that this can't be done.

As for the recent wireless problems, those are not confined to the law library, so sadly, everyone is equally inconvenienced. IT has been working hard to correct the situation, which appears to have been set off by a power outage.
