PATRON SUGGESTION

There has been an extraordinary increase this semester in the noise level in the LRC, which is disruptive to students trying to study in quiet areas. Many students (including non-law students) don't seem to know not to talk in quiet areas. Can you please spread the word that silence is requested in quiet areas? You could put up some signs or walk through the library please and ask people not to talk. Also please mention this in library tours. Thank you!

LIBRARY RESPONSE

September 14, 2007

This problem comes and goes, and you'll have to take my word for it that signs don't help. People tend to ignore the signs just as they are ignoring accepted library protocol. We will do our best to make our patrols and reminders during library tours more effective. Please don't hesitate to politely ask noisy patrons to be silent and to alert library staff if you are having a problem with someone who is uncooperative.
