PATRON SUGGESTION

August 5, 2008

New 1Ls, as well as non-law students, are unaware that there are silent areas in the LRC where it is distracting for them to be talking. Others are trying to focus.

Please tell incoming students about appropriate volume levels in the LRC and post signs to inform non-law students who also “study” here.

Thank you.

LIBRARY RESPONSE

August 26, 2008

I have also noticed that some new patrons are unaware that noise in the atrium reaches study areas on other floors (despite the signs we have posted in the atrium). We are trying to pass on this message to new students as we bring them through the library on their introductory tours. We are also working on some signs to post on the doors leading to the atrium from the information services area and from the reading room.

If you need assistance at any time in dealing with noise disturbances, do not hesitate to come to the circulation desk or the reference desk and ask for help.
