

2014-2015

Documenting Community Engagement at USD

Representatives from various departments, schools, and programs on campus shared the many ways their students, faculty, and staff engaged in the local and global community during the 2014-2015 academic year. The University Assessment Committee and the Mulvaney Center for Community, Awareness and Social Action formalized the data collection process in 2012 and we are proud to share the breadth of USD's commitment to the community.

Community Partners

"Community engagement describes the collaboration between institutions of higher education and their larger communities (local, regional/state, national, global) for the mutually beneficial exchange of knowledge and resources in a context of partnership and reciprocity. These partnerships serve the purpose of enriching scholarship, research, and creative activity; enhancing curriculum, teaching and learning; preparing educated, engaged citizens; strengthening democratic values and civic responsibility; addressing critical societal issues; and contributing to the public good"

(Carnegie Classification for Community Engagement).
