What is the Fall Forum?

The Supply Chain Management Institute's (SCMI) Fall Forum is a stimulating and thought-provoking afternoon of keynote presentations and panel discussions by global organizations, in which industry experts and university faculty will share their views and experiences for understanding the challenges facing companies in today's global environment and enabling firms to adapt their supply chains to meet these evolving demands. The Forum serves as an ideal venue for students, faculty, and industry partners alike to learn what supply chain leaders are doing to solve critical-to-success problems. There is also ample time provided for valuable networking with other attendees.

Who will be in attendance?

- Practitioners from senior levels of supply chain management and related fields
- Researchers, instructors and students in supply chain management and related topics
- Others whose work or interests involve supply chain management

Why should my organization sponsor the Fall Forum?

There are primarily two reasons:

- 1) Sponsorship dollars support students, who attend for free. For every $1,000 in sponsorship contributions, we are able to invite four students.
- 2) Sponsorships also provide unique visibility for your company to collaborate with a leading university in the supply chain world. The Fall Forum typically attracts 100 to 150 leading and upcoming supply chain practitioners and thinkers, from more than 50 companies, making this a dynamic and educational event for those who attend.
