This talk draws on Dr. Smith's pathbreaking work on decolonizing methodologies and indigenous research to expand upon the power of these approaches to engage with the significant issues of our times.

Shifting the paradigm and unsettling status quo approaches to research is part of the decolonizing project as is bringing forth newly imagined possibilities for questions, approaches, engagements and the creation of de colonial knowledge, disciplines and pedagogies. The talk will focus on the possibilities that we have yet to realize in relation to Indigenous Peoples and Indigenous knowledge.
