

CENTER FOR CHRISTIAN SPIRITUALITY

FALL 2010

Dear Friends,

Twenty-five years ago the Institute for Christian Ministries began its service to USD and to the San Diego region. In 2001, the Center for Christian Spirituality was established to carry on this work but with the more specific focus of addressing and fostering spirituality in four areas: personal enrichment, academic life, professional life and social justice. As we begin the Center's tenth year, the need for and the integration of spirituality in these four areas is stronger than ever. In the face of changes that arrive at seemingly breakneck speed – whether urban development, climate change, economic decline, or educational paradigm shifts – the need to be grounded in the deepest and most ultimate values is imperative. Perhaps one of our greatest challenges is to embrace the call to be agents of change as we participate in the transformation of life from God's perspective. I invite you to attend our programs this semester with the hope that they will offer wisdom and strength during these times of great promise and peril.

Sincerely,

Barbara Quinn, RSCJ
Director

KEYNOTE LECTURE:

“Christian Spirituality as a Way of Living Publicly”

Philip Sheldrake, Ph.D.

Christian spirituality is concerned with our worldviews and overall conduct of life rather than with “spiritual” practices in isolation, integrating theological reflection with transformative practice, personal development with public existence, and contemplation with social change. Today Christian spirituality has a powerful relevance in the practice of everyday life in urban environments. Soon around 66% of humanity will live in cities. This makes the meaning and future of cities one of the most challenging spiritual issues of our times. This talk will first outline why and how Christian spirituality concerns our public existence and will then speak specifically about spirituality in the city. How do built environments shape our spiritual vision? What are the key “urban virtues” for the 21st century?
