Introduction
So, What Is This Thing?

In short, this eBook is a collection of different options that may forgive, discharge, or pay for all or a portion of your federal student loans.

Simple, right? The tricky stuff comes on the following pages.

Why We Created This

Quite frankly, because we’re awesome. But really, because we care about your success managing your student loans.

The amount of options out there is dizzying and confusing, and we think it’s cruel to make you figure it out all on your own. Also, we haven’t found another resource out there that covers all the options like this does (and we’d know—we work in student loans).

We figured you might want some help, and you might not like that help to come in the form of a big, intimidating table or webpage. So we wrote this easy-to-navigate book and did our best to collect everything in one place. There may be more options out there, and some of the ones here may change, so it’s always good to do your own research too. Still, we hope you think this resource is a helpful jumping-off point.

Ground Rules: What Are Forgiveness And Discharge?

Student loan forgiveness and discharge are programs instituted by the federal government (as well as some state governments, organizations, and businesses) that eliminate all or part of a student’s loans if he or she qualifies. These options exist to help borrowers shoulder the burden of student debt if they give back to their community, work in fields or areas of need, or face unpredictable, extenuating circumstances.

The difference between loan forgiveness and discharge is the circumstances that can cancel the debt. Loan discharges usually occur if there is no way the borrower can pay a loan (e.g., a total and permanent disability or death) or if a borrower can no longer apply the education for which the loan was granted (e.g., the school the borrower was attending closed before they could finish their program).

Loan forgiveness happens when the forgiving party (e.g., the government) determines that the borrower has given back to the community in a way they’ve specified, like through teaching or public service. Special repayment programs can act as a form of forgiveness as well. Federal and governments, as well as organizations, offer these programs to promote service in needed fields or high-need areas.
Covering Your Bases

Though forgiveness is a huge opportunity for any do-gooders out there, planning a career and loan payments around it may not be the best idea. Regulations change, you may not meet all the requirements, or forgiveness could take longer than you think. Make sure to prepare for these possibilities—and have a backup plan.

You should never take on student loan debt assuming that you will be able to forgive all or part of it down the road. Always borrow the bare minimum you need, and think of any potential forgiveness benefits as a (very) happy bonus.

Also, know that the IRS considers many student loan forgiveness options to be taxable—so if you do have some or all of your loans forgiven, the forgiven amount may end up affecting your tax bill at the end of the year. To determine if forgiveness is taxable, the IRS will generally look at whether the forgiveness occurred due to the borrower fulfilling a service requirement. If you are fulfilling a service requirement to receive forgiveness, then the IRS will generally not tax the amount. However, you should consult a tax professional to determine whether the forgiveness you receive is taxable.

You can read more about this at www.irs.gov

Applying For Forgiveness

To apply for forgiveness, you may need proof that you worked for the required number of years at the location or in the profession that makes you eligible for forgiveness.

We linked all of the forms for the listed forgiveness options, but a simple Google search may allow you to find other possibilities as well. Be wary of scams and the fine print before filing for anything. You shouldn’t have to pay to apply for forgiveness or discharge.

Using This Book

We designed this eBook to help you discover, access, and learn more about what options for forgiveness are available to you. We highlighted eligibility criteria, qualifying loans, and the steps for pursuing an option—including links to the forms you need to apply. There’s also a glossary at the end of the book if you need to know the difference between loan types or repayment options.

A quick warning: This book is not all-inclusive by any means. Many employers offer student loan repayment benefits, and there may be other forgiveness programs that we haven’t found. Even if you don’t see anything you might be eligible for here, it never hurts to ask around at your place of employment, city, state, or even any social clubs or sports teams you may participate in. We’ll do our best to keep this book current, but sometimes programs like these can change or get phased out.

Also, be sure to visit the sites we’ve linked to for complete eligibility requirements. These programs have lots of ins and outs (you didn’t think getting rid of your loans would be easy, right?), so we only included the highlights.

Financial Hardship

The following options are for borrowers who face financial hardship based on income or debt.
Bankruptcy

To Be Eligible ...

You must prove to a bankruptcy judge that repaying your loans would be an undue hardship. This standard generally requires you to show that there is no likelihood of any future ability to repay. As a result, it can be difficult to discharge federal student loans through bankruptcy.

If you are eligible for this type of discharge, you can have up to 100% of your loan’s amount forgiven. You may also regain eligibility of federal student aid if you previously lost it.

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Stafford loans
- Parent PLUS loans
- Grad PLUS loans
- Consolidation loans
- Perkins loans

Next Steps

You must apply for this type of discharge in an adversary proceeding in bankruptcy court. To learn how to go about doing this, look here.

Income-Based Repayment

To Be Eligible ...

You must make 25 years of eligible payments or 300 payments under the income-based repayment (IBR) program. Only payments made on or after July 1, 2009, count.

Not all borrowers qualify for IBR. To qualify, you must have a partial financial hardship—meaning that payments to your eligible loans exceed 15% of your discretionary income. IBR caps the maximum monthly payment at 15% of your discretionary income. This is the difference between your AGI and 150% of the annual poverty guideline for your family size and state.

If you are eligible, you can have up to 100% of your outstanding balance forgiven after 25 years (10 if you work in public service).

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Stafford loans
- Grad PLUS loans
- Consolidation loans, except loans that include Parent PLUS loans

Next Steps

To apply for IBR, you need to submit two forms to your servicer: an application and an IRS Tax Form 4506-T.
Income-Contingent Repayment

To Be Eligible ...

You must make 25 years of eligible payments or 300 payments under the income-contingent repayment (ICR) program.

Payments are calculated each year and are based on your annual income (this includes your spouse’s income if you file jointly), family size, and the total amount of your federal student loans. Payments are capped at 20% of your discretionary income.

If you are eligible, you can have up to 100% of your outstanding balance forgiven after 25 years (10 if you work in public service).

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Direct Stafford loans
- Direct Grad PLUS loans
- Direct Consolidation loans (including those with Parent PLUS loans)

Next Steps

Pay As You Earn Forgiveness

To Be Eligible ...

You must be a new Direct Loan borrower as of October 1, 2007, with a disbursement made after October 1, 2011. Any Direct Consolidation loan made on or after October 1, 2011, that does not include a Parent PLUS loan or a loan made prior to October 1, 2007 is eligible.

You must make 20 years (10 if you work in public service) of payments under the Pay As You Earn repayment plan. Not all borrowers qualify for Pay As You Earn. To qualify, you must have a partial financial hardship—meaning payments to your eligible loans exceed 10% of your discretionary income. Pay As You Earn caps your maximum monthly payment at 10% of discretionary income (the difference between your AGI and 150% of the annual poverty guideline for your family size and state).

If you are eligible, you can have up to 100% of your outstanding balance (after 240 eligible payments) forgiven.

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Direct Consolidation loans, except those that include a Parent PLUS loan or a loan made prior to October 1, 2007

Next Steps

You may be eligible to have 100% of your loan discharged if someone fraudulently obtained the loan in your name. This includes identity theft and false certification. Forgery is another kind of fraud addressed in our links and references section.
False Certification Due To Identity Theft

To Be Eligible ...

The person who stole your identity must have been convicted of the crime. Generally, you must also file and submit a police report and various other evidence of identity theft as requested by the loan holder and/or the U.S. Department of Education. In addition, you must be willing to assist in any proceedings related to the investigation and/or prosecution of the identity theft. This type of discharge is only for loans received after July 1, 2006. If you meet the requirements, you are eligible to receive up to 100% of your student loan discharged.

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Stafford loans
- Grad PLUS loans

Next Steps

To discharge your loans due to identity theft, fill out an identity theft report, file a police report, and contact your loan holder.

False Loan Certification

To Be Eligible ...

This discharge is for borrowers whose schools falsely certified their eligibility for a loan. This can be caused by a school official falsely signing the borrower’s name on a loan application or master promissory note, which resulted in the borrower not benefitting from the funds. This is called a false certification due to unauthorized signature.

False certification also occurs when a school admits a student even though the student did not meet the requirements of admission. In this instance, the borrower did not have the ability to benefit from the education received. This is called a false certification due to ability to benefit.

The final cause of false loan certification is disqualifying status, meaning the student is unable to meet the legal requirements for employment in the student’s state of residence in the occupation for which the program of study was intended due to age (upon completion of training), physical or mental condition, criminal record, or other reason. This disqualifying status must have existed at the time the loan was issued.

This discharge option is only for loans received on or after January 1, 1986. If you meet these requirements, you are eligible to receive up to 100% of your federal student loan discharged.

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Stafford loans
- Grad PLUS loans
- Parent PLUS loans
- Consolidation loans

Next Steps

To apply for this type of discharge:

- Fill out this form for the false certification due to unauthorized signature and submit to your loan holder.
- Fill out this form for the false certification due to ability to benefit and submit to your loan holder.
- Fill out this form for the disqualifying status and submit it to your loan holder.
Medical

The following options are for borrowers who suffer from physical or mental impairments or have died.
Death

To Be Eligible ...

In the unfortunate case of the passing of the borrower, the borrower’s family can have the borrower’s loans discharged. Parent PLUS loans can be discharged if the borrower (the parent) dies or if the student on whose behalf the loan was borrowed dies. In the case of spousal Consolidation loans, only the portion of the loan attributed to the deceased borrower can be discharged.

If you meet these requirements, you are eligible to receive up to 100% of your remaining balance discharged. In addition, payments made on behalf of the borrower after the borrower’s death will be refunded.

LOANS THAT QUALIFY

- Stafford loans
- Grad PLUS loans
- Parent PLUS loans
- Consolidation loans
- Perkins loans

Next Steps

You must send an original or certified copy of the death certificate (or a photocopy of either) to all of the borrower’s loan holders to discharge the loans.

Total And Permanent Disability

To Be Eligible ...

A physician must certify that the borrower is unable to engage in substantial gainful activity due to a physical or mental impairment. This impairment must be expected to result in death or last for a continuous period of at least 60 months, or it must have already lasted for a continuous period of at least 60 months.

The Secretary of Veteran Affairs (VA) can also certify the borrower to be unemployable due to a service-connected disability.

Effective July 1, 2013, borrowers may be eligible for discharge if they have been certified as disabled by the Social Security Administration (SSA) where the notice of award for Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits indicates that the borrower’s next scheduled disability review will be within 5-7 years.

Any remaining balance on your federal student loans will be discharged from the date that your physician certifies your application.

If the VA certified your application, any federal student loan amounts owed after the date of the service-related injury will be discharged.

If you were approved due to the SSA determination, any remaining balance on your federal student loans would be discharged as of the date the SSA determination is received by the Department of Education on or after July 1, 2013.

You must return any disbursements made after the TPD certification approval within 120 days.

Part Four: Other Useful Stuff
Glossary

Trying to figure out what some of this student loan lingo actually means?
You came to the right place.
Bankruptcy: A process by which some or many of your debts can be discharged—meaning you won't have to pay them. However, it can come with some major costs, like giving up some of your assets (such as your home, car, etc.). Most importantly, student loans can be difficult to discharge through bankruptcy.

Discharge: The cancellation of a student loan debt due to certain rare circumstances, such as a school closure, the death of the borrower, or total and permanent disability.

Direct Loan Program (DL): The most common federal loan program. With Direct loans, the federal government lends money directly to students, instead of going through a private bank (see FFELP). DL offers subsidized and unsubsidized Direct Stafford loans, federal Direct Consolidation loans, and Direct PLUS loans. As of June 30, 2010, all federal student loans are Direct loans.

Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP): Prior to July 1, 2010, the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP) was an alternative way to get Stafford, PLUS, SLS, and Consolidation loans. Private lenders originated FFELP loans with government backing. As of June 30, 2010, new FFELP loans are no longer issued.

Forgiveness: The cancellation of a loan’s remaining balance—or a portion of the balance—by the federal government.

Loan Repayment Plans

- Income-Based Repayment (IBR): Plan that sets your payment amounts based on your income and family size and caps your payments at 15% of your discretionary income if you are eligible. After 25 years (10 if you work in public service) and 300 eligible payments, any remaining balance may be forgiven but would be taxable.

- Income-Contingent Repayment (ICR): Similar to IBR, but caps your payments at 20% of your discretionary income and is available for Direct loan borrowers only. After 25 years (10 if you work in public service) and 300 eligible payments, any remaining balance may be forgiven but would be taxable.

- Pay As You Earn Repayment: Another plan similar to IBR that allows you to make payments of no more than 10% of your discretionary income if you qualify. After 20 years (10 if you work in public service), any remaining outstanding balance may be forgiven but would be taxable.

Types of Loans

- Consolidation loans: Loans that combine one or more pre-existing loans into one new loan and (generally) a longer repayment term.

- Health Professions Student Loans (HPSLs): Loans for healthcare professionals specializing in many areas other than primary care or nursing. HPSLs are part of Title VII of the Public Health Service Act.

- Institutional loans: Non-federal loans provided directly by your school.

- Nursing Student Loans (NSLs): Loans for nursing professionals looking to supplement their financial aid. NSLs are part of Title VIII of the Public Health Service Act.

- Stafford loans: The most common federal student loans. Stafford loans can be either subsidized or unsubsidized.

- Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS): Federal loans for financially independent students. This program was eliminated in 1994 with the creation of unsubsidized Stafford loans.

- Perkins loans: Federal loans that schools award to their students who have exceptional financial need.

- PLUS loans: Loans borrowed by parents of eligible dependent students (Parent PLUS loans) or by graduate students themselves (Grad PLUS loans) typically after exhausting their Stafford loan awards.

- Private student loans: Non-federal loans provided by private lenders that can help you pay for school, if you don't have enough other financial aid.
