In the wake of the unconscionable—although grievously not abnormal—murders of Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, George Floyd, and too many others, how can we work towards destroying the injustices that have punctured the foundation of our Nation's institutions for far too long? The Public Interest Law Foundation of the University of San Diego School of Law joins numerous other student organizations and stands in solidarity with our Black peers, colleagues, friends, family, and community members against the racism that has infiltrated our society and legal system for far too long.

Justice is slow to clothe the systemic racism permeating the fabric of our society; however, action during this time is paramount. Whether it is contacting those in positions of power, educating oneself and others, or providing a supporting voice to those expressing their pain and frustration, together we can seek justice for those who have been victims of systemic racism. Let our choices now be a prelude of hope to justice's chorus that we will attend only through continued action and support.

In Solidarity,
