Sunday and Beyond

Church

The English word church comes from the Greek word ekklesia which refers to “an assembly.” Thus, before all else, the church is the people; we are the church. While most of us think about a building when we hear the word, church is, first and foremost, about community.

Ekklesia actually comes from two Greek words, ek meaning “out” and kaleo meaning “call.” As the church, therefore, we are a community called out of our familiar places and comfortable routines—called out of our own, limited agendas in order to enact the immense agenda of Christ.

In the Catholic-Christian tradition, community is absolutely essential to discipleship. Our task is not to walk individually with God, but to grow in relationship with God within community. Spirituality is never a private search for what is highest in oneself; rather, it is a communal search for the face of God in the faces of others.

One of the most important insights of Christianity is also usually underappreciated. In the passage we heard tonight from Mark’s Gospel, Jesus expresses what is sometimes known as the “Greatest Commandment” by saying that we must “love God with all our heart, and with all our soul, with all our mind, and with all our strength” and that we must also “love our neighbor as ourselves.” Jesus’ point is that what seems to be two commandments is actually just one. We can only understand what it means to love God—and we can only experience God’s love—when we are in relationship with others.

This is why we need the community of the church. As the church, we are the community who strives, together, to live the mystery of God.

Today’s Word

Jesus replied, “The first is this: Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is Lord alone! You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your strength.

The second is this: You shall love your neighbor as yourself. There is no other commandment greater than these.” MK 12: 29-31

Guided by the vision of being a model of Christian response to human needs, Catholic Charities of San Diego strives to meet the challenge of the ever-changing community by utilizing spiritual, human and financial resources to enable those they serve to experience dignity and respect.

Last week's collection raised $498.64 for Our Lady's School. Thank you for your generosity.
